MARCH 13TH 2016

The Fifth Sunday of Lent

Growing as Disciples of Jesus, Making Disciples For Jesus

Sacrament of Reconciliation

I intend to make every effort I can to remove every barrier someone has to receiving the sacrament of mercy during this year of Mercy, and I know one of those steps is to give people knowledge, because knowledge is power.

Below, you will find the steps to the sacrament, both as a refresher should you desire it, and as a way of praying through what occurs when we receive this great gift.

Of course, there are many great helps online, and you can always ask me anything in the confessional as well. Never let fear stop you from the sacraments.

Steps to the Sacrament

1. Start with the sign of the cross, then begin: "Bless me, Father, for I have sinned. It has been _____ (days/weeks/months/years) since my last confession."

2. Continue: "These are my sins: _____" We tell the priest those we remember from our Examination of Conscience, or others that we need to tell, indicating to some degree how often we fall in each area.

3. After telling the priest our sins, we say: "I am sorry for these and for all of my sins." The priest will say a few words to us. We listen to him.

4. The priest will give us a penance (usually a prayer or a kind deed).

5. Then say an Act of Contrition,

6. Tell the priest thank you after he gives a penance and prays the prayer of absolution.

7. We do the penance the priest assigned, and thank God for His mercy and the strength we have received in the Sacrament of Reconciliation.

From one of our younger parishioner's prayers:

Beloved brothers and sisters in Christ the Lord, have no fear. Christ cares for those who have faith in him just as a shepherd cares for his sheep.

Christ teaches us that all people on this planet are worth of God's love and mercy. We have only to willingly open our hearts to him.

Let us pray sisters and brothers that Christ bless us with the courage to be good and loyal disciples. Praise be to Christ the Lord!

Marriage Minute

Ever been caught between a rock and a hard place? This is an age-old question and relevant to so much of everyday family life. When we get down into the trenches of marriage and family life, we sometimes seem at a crossroads of two bad options. A couple in pain looks at a lifetime of misery on one hand or divorce on the other. A woman in a crisis pregnancy sees the struggle of single parenthood on one hand and abortion on the other. A family member makes a bad choice and we see compromising our beliefs on one hand or severing a relationship on the other. This is tough stuff! In this Sunday's readings, God is all about offering a new option we hadn't seen before. We have a God who opened up the Sea for the Israelites to pass through when they were trapped. He makes rivers run through deserts. And when He himself was stuck between justice and mercy toward the adulterous woman, He got the whole crowd to disperse with one simple question. There is a promise here for us this weekend. "Those that sow in tears shall reap rejoicing." Maybe the solution is a renewed love we never could have dreamed of. Maybe the answer is adoption for the "crisis" pregnancy? Maybe God shows us his own heart by teaching us to forgive one who rejects us. We can't know what solution God has up his sleeve. However, we do know two things. We can trust Him, and we won't know His answer unless we ask Him. The lesson of Lent and preparation for Easter is that God is an expert at bringing good out of seemingly impossible situations.

Take a mini-retreat this Lent and join us for Benediction, Adoration,

& Rosary,
Tuesdays, 7:00 pm— Recharge your spiritual life with prayer, peace and quiet and grace!

Reflecting On Sunday's Readings

“One afternoon my four year old niece and my six year old daughter started an argument, which grew louder and louder. I was about to intervene when my daughter stomped down the stairs, ‘Mom,’ she yelled, ‘Jesus wants us to be salt of the earth and Paige is being the pepper!’” (Cherish Ann Marie Eile, in the Christian Reader) Though comical, this incident aptly introduces the subject of this week’s Gospel Reading, which is the difference between righteous judgment and unrighteous judgmentalism. “What do you say about her (the adulteress)?” is the question with which the Pharisees and scribes confronted Jesus. It was not a legitimate question for they had already determined their views about her. In their minds condemnation and the consequential stoning of this woman was the conclusion to which they had already jumped. Now having caught and condemned her, they used this occasion and this question to endeavor to catch and condemn Jesus. But Jesus, “knowing what was in the heart of all men,” authorized the ones without sin to begin the stoning process. These men, so accustomed to condemning others, now could not escape self-condemnation, so in guilt they slunk away one by one. Did Jesus by his actions condone this woman’s behavior? Of course not! What he did was to judge righteous judgment, but simultaneously avoided judgmentalism. Righteous judgment recognizes the difference between right and wrong, but it also with mercy and grace properly assesses the situation. This woman, like many of us, was experiencing a desert and wilderness experience in her life similar to that which is spoken of in this week’s First Reading. Also, like many of us who turn to the empty things of the world in hope of finding our way and finding something to satisfy, this woman turned to adultery, which failed to satisfy her as it always does. Righteous judgment not only recognizes the problem but it also recognizes the solution. In this case the solution was mercy and forgiveness, forces which compel us to stop living for ourselves and to begin living for him who is the source of this love. (2 Corinthians 5:14) Righteous judgment accompanied with mercy and forgiveness offers a way in the wilderness and water in the desert, it offers life. The judgmentalism of the Pharisees and scribes also recognizes right and wrong behavior, but it is not based on the nature and character of God, but on one’s own supposed self-righteousness. And because self-righteousness can only be maintained by making others less righteous, judgmentalism always roots out sin in others and condemns it ruthlessly while ignoring one’s own sin and failure. Unlike the First Reading, judgmentalism does not offer “a way in the wilderness,” or life giving water “in the dessert,” but instead speeds the dying process. Ultimately that is what this incident is all about, judgmentalism. In their self-righteousness the Pharisees and scribes wanted to be able to condemn Jesus. If he let her go without punishment they could accuse him of ignoring the Law. If he also condemned her they would accuse him of hypocrisy. In their minds they had already condemned Jesus, now all they needed to do was to find an acceptable accusation against him. In the end their spirit of condemnation ensnared them, as the pointed finger of accusation turned to focus on their own unrighteous histories and reckoned them, “Guilty!” Hopefully, as we near the end of our lenten journey, we have been able to assess our relationship with Christ and our commitment to follow him in obedience. But we must ask ourselves whether our view of ourselves, and others, is being controlled by aspects of righteous judgment or by judgmentalism? If it is the latter we will find our spirit dragged down by a sense of guilt and condemnation. If it is the former we will find our long faces turning to joyous smiles as we recognize Jesus’ saying also to us, “Neither do I condemn you; go, and do not sin again.” We will understand the truth Monsignor Romano Guardini proclaims in his book, The Lord, that, “God is moved by the suffering human heart; the pain of it clouds his face, and we understand who he is and what St. Paul means when he speaks of the goodness and kindness of God.”
