The Twenty-Sixth Sunday in Ordinary Time

Growing as Disciples of Jesus, Making Disciples For Jesus

St. Bruno—Feast Day, October 6th. Bruno was born of a noble family in Germany. He became a master teacher and inspired students like St. Hugh of Grenoble and Pope Urban II to become great spiritual leaders like himself. He had a gift for friendship. His appreciation for people and his loving personality made him unforgettable. Bruno was a well-known theology teacher for more than eighteen years. He headed schools and wrote essays on the psalms and St. Paul's letters. One day Bruno and his friends decided to become hermits and live a life of prayer. He and six companions went to the mountains of Chartreuse where they built a chapel. On the way there, Bruno met St.

Hugh, who told him that he had dreamed of seven stars settling on the Alps. He realized that the stars stood for the seven men. Six years later Bruno was called to Rome by Pope Urban II. He gave up his life of prayer and silence in order to be an advisor to the pope. When the pope offered to make him a bishop, Bruno declined. He founded another hermitage in Italy where he died. Bruno is considered the founder of the Carthusian monks.

St. Bruno, pray for us!

MARRIAGE MINUTE

“Complete my joy by being of the same mind, with the same love, united in heart, thinking one thing.” This sounds great until your spouse attempts to load the dishwasher and does it wrong or dresses your toddler in clashing patterns for Mass! Fortunately, we don't have to have the same approach to things in order to live this out. We can be “of the same mind” by developing a couple value. To do this 1. Understand the value behind your spouse's behavior. 2. Make that value important to you, since it's important to him/her. 3. Ask yourself, “What course of action will bring us closer as a couple?” The skill is taught in detail in the Living in Love suite of programs. Register today!

Reflecting On Sunday's Readings

“Whenever I take the opportunity to actively love God in personal obedience, I end up sensing a new tenderness in my heart toward Him and a stronger resolve to obey again next time. Obedience is not an end, but a means—a means to express our love to God, and a means to increase our love for God. It is a catalyst in the process of loving God and becoming more like Jesus.” (Martha Thatcher in The Freedom of Obedience) Obedience, or the lack thereof, always reveals where our heart is in relationship to God. Obedience, or the lack thereof, always reveals the direction our heart is moving, either toward God or away from God. Obedience is never neutral, for to not obey God is to disobey his will. Inaction to God’s known will is simply a passive form of rebellion, but rebellion none the less. Fortunately, God looks at the entire process of obedience and not simply at our first response, so we have hope and an opportunity to make right a wrong initial response to disobey. For many of us our initial response to God’s will is negative, either because we are so needy or in some cases because we have developed habits of disobedience. But, fortunately, as we linger over the implications of obeying or not obeying, our heart is softened by the warmth of his love and we say, “Yes!” as we allow ourselves to be molded to his will. Others of us are always ready with a resounding, “Yes!” only later to find our resolve weakening, and our will cooling into an icy, “No!” And all the while God is watching the process and looking at our heart. As the first reading points out, not only is our initial response important to God, but also our resolve to follow through on our commitment to obey. Obedience is dependent on our knowing what God wants and expects from us, and it pre-supposes a desire and willingness to do his will once we know it. Consequently, God has promised to reveal his will to us, both in general terms and in more specific personal ways, through sacred Scripture, the Church’s teaching, prayer, godly counsel, etc. Interestingly, obedience also becomes a means of knowing his will, for many times God only reveals the first steps and then unfolds more of his will as we respond in obedience. Once we know his will, further illumination comes into play as we choose to either obey or not obey the aspects of his will that we already know. One of the benefits of obedience, and there are many, is that God’s grace and help become a reality to us as we respond to his enablement to do his will. The promise of John 14:21 is that when we love Jesus by obeying his revealed will that he will abide with, or dwell, with us and show us even more of his love. Why would any of us, knowing this to be true, decide to live disobedient lives and deny ourselves this promise? We see in the second reading both an evidence of this principle and an example. Jesus who came as Immanuel, God with us in the flesh, was faced with the humility of becoming human when he was divine, with taking on our sins when he was sinless, and with dying when he was eternal and immortal, yet he did not shy away from obediently doing the Father’s will. The Father in turn exalted Jesus, giving him a name and honor that are above all creation. He, the perfect example of obedience to his Father’s will, shows us the joy that comes from obedience. The parable in Sunday’s Gospel reading the man had two sons who each obeyed quite differently. The analogy is clear, we too are children who are faced with a decision regarding whether we will obey our heavenly Father in word only, or in the spirit of obedience. What will you choose to do?
